What both tiers include, always

- The same white-glove install — Context OS and Brain Clone are hands-on for every client, no self-serve download.
- Never invented facts — every module leaves a placeholder rather than guessing a number, a feature, or a claim.
- No CRM, no email, no MLS integration required — everything is paste-in, copy-out by design.

Why these numbers

- Every comparable tool found is self-serve — sign up and use it yourself. Saleswise (CMAs + listing copy + scripts) is $39/mo; Coffee & Contracts (social templates only, still DIY) is $74/mo; Structurely (AI lead response alone) is $179/mo. Typical realtor AI spend clusters at $80–150/mo across 1–3 separate tools.
- Complete replaces roughly that same stack — lead response, listing content, evergreen content, and CMA research — in one connected system, personally installed, for less than most agents already spend across separate subscriptions.
- The setup fee reflects real hands-on time: a 1–3 hour install session plus weekly 15-minute check-ins through the rollout — the thing no self-serve competitor offers at any price.
- Full CRM+AI platforms (Ylopo + a CRM) run $1,500–3,500+/month combined — Complete sits well under that ceiling while covering more ground for a solo agent.
